Margaret Jane MacDonald

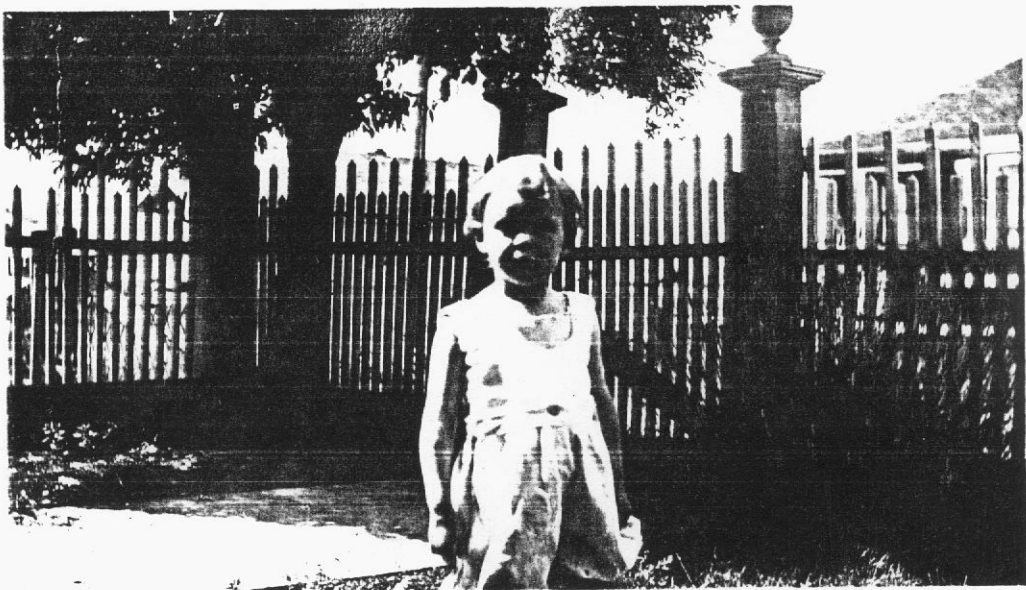

Born 19 July 1853; Richibucto, New Brunswick

Occupation - School Teacher

Died 14 January 1932

Buried - Ross Bay Cemetery

Alexander and Margaret Vye came to Victoria around 1880, and on the 11th. day of January 1884, they purchased from the Richmond Estate, a complete dairy farm. They lived in a small one storey brick house on the farm, which is now the Johnson Property. The current residence was built in 1892 and has been in the family till we purchased it in May 1979 from Margaret and Kathleen Allen. They were daughters of Hugo and Ella Gertrude Allen. Ella was the youngest daughter of Alexander and Margaret Vye. She was born in 1892. The eldest son Putman was born in 1880. In 1911 or 1912 he built the granite house across the street. The family always referred to it as the honeymoon cottage. John H. Gar, the second eldest, born 1882, built the Victorian Style cottage on the corner of Haultain and Richmond on family property. Approximately 1906. We have been actively restoring the house since, with the help of early pictures and information kindly supplied by the family.

Winners saved past from ravages of time

Bill McKechnie faced the ravages of 30 years of neglect when he bought the big old house at 998 Humboldt St. 18 months ago.

Eight months later, he had transformed the house into The Beaconsfield Inn, a gracious old English mansion, complete with conservatory garden.

Built in 1908 for Gertrude Genge, the daughter of real estate agent R. P. Rithet, and her husband Laurence, the house was one of the early designs by architect Samuel Maclure.

It was slated for demolition before it was bought and restored by McKechnie, one of a group of people honored Tuesday night by the Historic Society for their efforts in restoring the heritage of Greater Victoria's heritage properties.

The society also recognized the former Carnegie library building on Yates Street, the Colonial Metropole Hotel on Johnson Street, the old Bank building on Government Street, the former Italianate house on Carrick Street, a house at 941 Meares St. and a house at 314 King's Pl. in James Bay.

HUNTINGTON PLACE in James Bay was built in 1890 in the late Victorian-Queen Anne style for contractor Eli Beam.

Architect John Keay, with the help of Harold Collier, Larry Cook and Ken Lane, restored Huntington Place, modernizing where necessary and saving such key features as plaster sconces and ceiling mouldings.

WESTCOAST SAVINGS CREDIT UNION spent $500,000 to buy and $1.8 million to renovate the Carnegie building last April.

The old greystone building was built as a factory in 1903 largely through a grant from the Andrew Carnegie Foundation. The building was designed for the philanthropist steel magnate.

The architectural firm of Hooper and Watson built in the then-popular Richardsonian Romanesque style, featuring heavy masonry round-headed arches.

The architectural firm of Siddall Dennis handled the year-long revival for Westcoast and vintage interior details were restored.

Modern furniture was stained to match the mahogany woodwork and antique light fixtures maintain the old-world theme; hidden modern lights keep visibility up to date.

JOHN AND HEATHER NICOL bought the Colonial Metropole Hotel at 541 Johnson St. from Harry Israel in 1968, when there were 22 units renting at about $65 a month each.

The low rent did not generate enough income to bring the building up to fire safety standards, so it was closed in 1976 as the Nicols and the City of Victoria dickered over renovation.

Work started last February and four months later the ground floor stores and seven apartments above were ready for occupation.

The exterior was refurbished, complete to the last detail of replacement cornices. Old materials were used as much as possible.

Inside, the old balustrades were stripped and refinished or replaced. The rooms were modernized with skylights in the bedrooms and sun decks on the roof.

The Nicols hope a new walkway alongside the building will be called John Teague walk after the building's designer.

BOOK-SELLER JIM MUNRO has his own office for the first time — a former bank manager's office in the old Royal Bank building at 1108 Government St.

The facade of the building constructed in 1909 for $60,000 is typical of Edwardian banks — classical and imposing. Victoria architect Thomas Hooper designed the building.

In the 1950s, the building was modernized with false ceilings covering magnificent plaster details.

Munro and his wife, Carol Sabiston, bought the building last September and within seven weeks had it restored to its original splendor.

The building had been vacant for three years when Munro moved in.

Under the false ceiling, Munro found the interior glass dome had been obliterated. So, he built a new dome, restored stained glass windows and stripped off tile to reveal the original terrazzo and hardwood floors.

"It was mostly a refurbishing job," said Munro.

FOR SIX YEARS, Patrick and Suzanne Bulmer have devoted all their spare time to their house at 1785 Carrick St.

The labor of love is nearing completion with only the hall and stairwell left to be done.

Alexander Vye, at various times a storekeeper, haberdasher, farmer and stone-quarry owner, built the house in 1892.

The house was handed down through the family until the Bulmers bought it in 1979.

They installed new insulation and electric wiring, stripped, repainted and replaced the wood, added plaster rosettes in some rooms, took out partitions, and refinished walls with traditional bordered wallpaper.

The dining room has been restored and a wood stove re-installed in the kitchen.

"We've been working on it for six years and I think it's been hard on the kids because we have given up family time to this project," said Suzanne Bulmer.

"We have a great plan to get it finished in 1985, but I'm not sure if we'll make it."

THE COSY HOUSE at 941 Meares St. was an early Maclure creation.

The chalet-style cottage combines the low profile of a colonial bungalow, half-timbering of the Tudor revival with the picturesque qualities of an Alpine chalet.

Restoring the house and garden has been a seven-year project for owners Tom Palfrey and Tom Putnam.

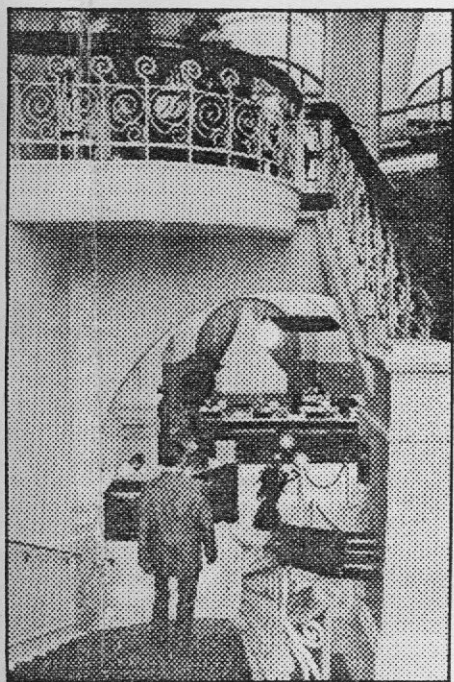

They re-papered and painted the interior, and painted the exterior green with brown-wine trim.

■ PUTNAM: 7-year joint project.

■ THE BULMERS: a long labor of love

■ WESTCOAST Credit Union.

■ HUNTINGTON PLACE.

■ NICOL: new splendor for an old hotel.
