3817 Carey Road 1937

William and Irene Augusta Henson

William Henson was a bricklayer with his father's concrete contracting firm, Henson and Company. His brother Jack also built himself a brick house, at 3833 Carey Road.

Designed in the Tudor Revival cottage style, this is a wood-frame house with brick wall cladding. It has a flat-topped hipped roof with a front gable and a gabled dormer. The gables are stuccoed and half-timbered. The dormer was added several years ago, but in the style of the front gable, as was traditional on Tudor Revival cottages (see 321 Gorge Road West).
