Importance of building in the Community:

A finely kept up example of a typical style of late Victorian middle class houses.

There are many homes around Victoria of almost identical plan. I have not listed all of them - but this example is representative. The present owner has maintained much of the original character while at the same time making necessary repairs. According to 1890 Colonist (and p7) this house was built in 1889, at a cost of $2,800.
